* A cookie is a tiny text file that enables a website to recognize a browser. Cookies are deposited in a text file on your computer and called back up and read the next time the internet server is contacted. By changing your browser settings, you – the user – can determine whether you wish to allow cookies and, if so, which cookies you wish to allow, block, or delete. Alternatively, you can also install ad blockers, such as Ghostery.

2. Embedded YouTube videos

On our websites, we embed videos of the platform YouTube in the so-called extended data protection mode, which are not stored on our servers. YouTube is operated by Google Ireland Ltd, Google Building Gordon House, 4 Barrow St, Dublin, D04 E5W5, Ireland. When you click on the embedded video, a connection is established to the servers of the provider YouTube, based in the United States, and certain information (e.g. your IP address) is sent to the provider, even if you are not logged in to the provider. We do not obtain knowledge of the type and scope of the data collected by YouTube and have no influence on its use. For the purpose and scope of the data collection and the further processing and use of the data by YouTube, as well as your rights in this regard and the available settings options for protecting your privacy, please refer to the provider's privacy policy: Privacy policy of Google: <https://policies.google.com/privacy?hl=de&gl=de>.

Playing the embedded videos is only possible if you have previously consented to the transfer of your data to YouTube (United States) in accordance with Art. 49 (1) a) GDPR. There is no adequate level of data protection in the US. This entails risks such as the lack of enforcement of rights of data subjects (individuals) or possible access by state authorities. You can revoke your consent at any time with effect for the future.
